

This year has been characterized by a flood of activity and events reaching more people than ever before. There is an unprecedented feeling of energy and excitement in City Club as reflected in the Club's many programs — all of which provide opportunities for learning, leadership and networking with citizens who share common interests.

Over 7,500 people attended Friday Forums while countless more heard them on OPB radio or saw them on cable TV. Nearly 100 members participated in research reports and ballot measure studies that generated enormous media interest, informing citizens across the city and state. And our Advocacy & Awareness Board is becoming a larger and stronger component of the Club each year. To that, add Issue Committees, New Leaders Council events, Citizen Read book discussions and the inaugural year of sold-out Citizen Salons, and you can see why it's been a watershed year.

And for that, I extend heartfelt thanks to all our members as well as the excellent professional staff who make City Club possible.

We are all so familiar with that Portland aphorism that it can begin to sound like a platitude. But, in fact, it is a deeply republican sentiment that animates the work of City Club.

C.E.S. Wood, the Portland lawyer and poet to whom the quote is attributed, not only reminds us that good citizens are valuable to our public life, but also challenges the notion of wealth as privately held and finite. In other words, Mr. Wood affirms that we can be enriched collectively by our own and our neighbors' participation in shared endeavors.

This year, we were all enriched by the lively public engagement of our fellow City Club members. We had members write and publish the influential report on the Portland Development Commission and then work with PDC and City Council to implement its recommendations. We had members engage in serious discussions of books and lectures and plays — all with the hope of understanding our shared experience a little bit better. We had thousands of members come to Friday Forums and ask questions bristling with intelligence and curiosity. And, we had many members just take a break from their daily lives and listen intently to the opinion of the person sitting next to them.

With fellow citizens like that, we are rich indeed.

City Club remains Oregon's premier public affairs organization, and its weekly Friday Forums are the cornerstone of public discourse on important community issues. Dozens of local and national figures have appeared before City Club to address topics ranging from politics and elections to economics and the environment. From June 2004 through May 2005, City Club held 44 Friday Forums with a total attendance of 7,630 — a 20 percent increase over the previous year. And that's not to mention the growing audience of tens of thousands more statewide who tune in to Oregon Public Broadcasting radio or watch on Portland Community Media and Oregon Public Affairs Network television. Internet users, too, can now either listen online from the Club's Web site or download the program using City Club's new podcasting feature to listen whenever and wherever is most convenient.

City Club has a history of tackling big issues and sparking public discussion. A board of 15 members sets the direction and provides oversight for dozens of volunteers who conduct research and write reports that inform public debate and become part of Oregon history. Between June 2004 and May 2005, City Club published two resolutions, four ballot measure studies and an influential report on Portland Development Commission that continues to resound through public discourse. Two committees continued their in-depth examination of vitally important issues, and several new topics were identified for study. Take one look into City Club's archives and it's easy to see why City Club is a highly respected source of credible and balanced information on issues affecting Portland, the region and the state of Oregon.

Portland Development Commission is one of the most powerful organizations in the city, and due to its broad scope and complex financial structure, it is one of the most difficult to assess. Since its inception in 1958, PDC has exercised sweeping powers to foster new development by purchasing or condemning and developing and assembling public and private property. Its original legislative charge was to relieve Portland of blight and urban decay; today, PDC describes its mission as "to bring together resources to achieve Portland's vision of a diverse, sustainable community with healthy neighborhoods, a vibrant urban core, a strong regional economy and quality jobs for all citizens." PDC's unique status as a semi-autonomous quasigovernmental agency makes it a flexible and responsive model to build unique private-public partnerships and capture opportunities as they arise, while its governmental status allows it to coordinate federal, state and local funding sources.

City Club's report on PDC represents the culmination of a two-year research process involving the cooperation of well over 100 individuals from all sectors of our community. The report touches on economic development, housing and tax increment financing, and offers analysis and opinions on the tension between opportunism and planning; the relationship between PDC and city council; accountability and public involvement; and PDC's effect on livability. The report also reversed the Club's 1971 recommendation that PDC be abolished.

Soon after its release, City Club held an open forum for members to discuss the report and ask questions of the study committee prior to voting on acceptance of the report's findings, conclusions and recommendations at the January 28, 2005 Friday Forum, where it was approved by a margin of more than 80 percent and subsequently handed over to an Advocacy & Awareness Committee. Clearly, City Club's conscientious work — widely read, frequently cited and embraced by PDC Commissioners and many community leaders — has helped to open up a longtime Portland powerhouse and set the stage for reshaping the long-term future of Portland Development Commission.

Ballot Measure Studies

Ballot Measure 34

Secretory Ballot Measure 31

• SUMMARY: Measure 34 would require state forests to equally balance sustainable timber production with resource conservation, specifically designating Tillamook and Clatsop Forests to be managed half for forest restoration and half for sustainable timber production. • RECOMMENDATION: Proponents failed to show that the current Forest Management Plan and current definition of "permanent value" represent such a threat to the forests' long-term health that they should be abandoned, and there was insufficient evidence that the 50-50 plan for Tillamook and Clatsop State Forests is a preferable change to current policy. The committee unanimously recommended a "vote no" position. • ACTION: Members voted to adopt a "vote

no" position on Measure 34. • COMMITTEE: Tim Carman, John Doussard, Kerry Forell, Bonnie Gee Yosick, Leslie S. Johnson, Ellen Price, Bryan Rhoads, chair Lori Irish Bauman and research adviser Denise Bauman

Ballot Measure 35

 SUMMARY: Measure 35 would cap noneconomic damages in medical malpractice cases at $500,000 (adjusted annually for inflation) in order to control rapidly increasing medical malpractice insurance premiums.

• RECOMMENDATION: Though committee members agreed on most points, they did not reach a unanimous recommendation. The majority recommended a "no" vote because the measure did not address core issues underlying the complex problems of increasing medical malpractice premiums, rising health care costs and reductions in access to care. The minority recommended a "yes" vote because the measure would help contain malpractice premiums and encourage insurers to offer policies to new

doctors, who sometimes find it difficult to secure coverage. • ACTION: Members voted to adopt a "vote no" position on Measure 35. • COMMITTEE: Patricia Elliott, Alana Bove Finn, Joanne Kahn, Francis Lancaster, Bert Lowry, Rhidian Morgan, chair Mark Skolnick and research adviser Jeff Knapp

Suppose the suppose the

• SUMMARY: Measure 36 would add to the Oregon Constitution a declaration that the policy of the State of Oregon and its political subdivisions is that "only a marriage between one man and one woman shall be valid or legally recognized as a marriage." • RECOMMENDATION: The committee concluded that denying same-sex couples the status of marriage discriminates against and harms same-sex couples and their families, and does not benefit opposite-sex couples in any meaningful way. The committee also reiterated previous City Club concerns over the process and precedent of amending the Oregon Constitution on contentious issues by a simple majority vote. The committee unanimously recommended a "no" vote on Measure 36.

• ACTION: Members voted to adopt a "vote no" position on Measure 36. • COMMITTEE:

Alan K. Brickley, Sylvia Golden, John Horvick, Tom K. Iverson, Morgan O'Toole-Smith, Khalid Wahab, Kurt Wehbring, Tom Welsh, chair Ed Gronke and research adviser Leslie Morehead

Ballot Measure 38

• SUMMARY: Measure 38 would abolish the State Accident Insurance Fund (SAIF), a public corporation handling workers compensation insurance, and require the state to assume authority over its accident fund.

• RECOMMENDATION: The committee found that the benefits of retaining SAIF far outweigh any potential benefit from abolishing it. The committee's analysis showed that SAIF is not and will not become a monopoly under Oregon's three-way system for workers compensation insurance. However, if Measure 38 were to pass, access to voluntary insurance for Oregon's small businesses would be at risk and those companies would face higher premiums if forced into the assigned risk pool. The committee recommended a "no" vote on Measure 38. • ACTION: Members voted to adopt a "vote no" position on

Measure 38. • COMMITTEE: Whitney Bates, Linda S. Craig, Robert D. Geary, Mary Ella Kuster, Dylan Parkins, Susan Pearce, Roger F. Smith, Roz Elms Sutherland, chair Hillary Barbour and research adviser Tim Hemstreet

Resolutions

Ballot Measure 37

SUMMARY: Measure 37 would require that governments pay owners, or forgo enforcement by repealing, changing, not applying restrictions, when certain land use restrictions reduce owners' property value.

RECOMMENDATION: The Research Board recommended a "no" vote on Measure 37 based on previous City Club studies and positions.

ACTION: The Board of Governors adopted the resolution on August 23, 2004.

Support of Proposed "Clean Money Campaigns in Portland" Draft Proposal Dated July 2004

SUMMARY: Recently, Portland City Council began to examine a system of public campaign finance at the city level. Prompted by a proposal from Commissioner Erik Sten and City Auditor Gary Blackmer, the Council, in April 2004, authorized Sten, the Commissioner of Public Works, and Blackmer to develop a system for public funding of the primary and general election campaigns for City Auditor, City Council and Mayor. In July 2004, the City Auditor and the Commissioner of Public Works released a document entitled Draft for Clean Money Campaigns in Portland. This proposal details a system of public campaign finance that adapts the statewide provisions of Measure 6 (2000) to Portland city elections. The proposal is similar to Measure 6 in all material aspects.

RECOMMENDATION: The Research Board recommended the Club express its support of the current draft of the Clean Money Campaigns in Portland proposal based on previous City Club studies and positions.

ACTION: The Board of Governors adopted the resolution on August 23, 2004.

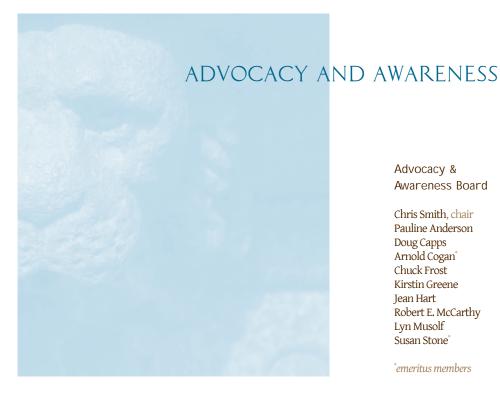

Works in Progress

Two research committees continued their work on long-term studies related to complex public policy issues. Both committees — How to Best Finance K-12 Education in Portland (Doug Marker, chair) and Early Childhood Development, Child Care and Education (Marilyn Richen, chair) — are expected to publish reports in 2005.

The Research Board initiated a short-term study of Portland's Fire & Police Disability & Retirement Fund: Building Long-term Financial Viability. The Board is also preparing for another short-term study to update the Club's existing report, The Initiative and Referendum in Oregon. Upcoming long-term studies include a look at issues related to partisanship in state government and an examination of Portland's business environment.

The Research Board has plans underway for a second Community Scan, reaching out to members, community leaders and the general public to solicit suggestions for research and program topics.

A database of more than 900 City Club reports and resolutions (many online in PDF format for free) is available at www.pdxcityclub.org. Printed copies of research reports are available from the City Club office.

City Club's Advocacy and Awareness activities reached a new level, with up to seven committees active at different times during the year.

The Club's Affordable Housing committee was instrumental in renewing funding for affordable housing at the city level while actively supporting the creation of a statewide coalition to advocate at the Legislature. Committee Chair: Clyde Doctor

The Voter-Owned Elections committee. working in concert with League of Women Voters, Oregon Action and a number of other groups, was successful in supporting City Council in enacting election reform. Committee Chair: Chris Smith

City Club has been strenuously advocating for the principles of its report on compensation for inequities sometimes created by Oregon's land use system, first opposing Measure 37 and then meeting with legislators and stakeholders to encourage implementation that better matches the Club's recommendations. Committee Chair: Mark Anderson

City Club's Sign Code committee partnered with the Mayor's office and mural artists in developing policy allowing artists to once again express themselves while maintaining regulations that prevent visual clutter. The committee also received a $500 grant to begin construction of a community database of billboard signs. Committee Chair: Kurt Wehbring

The Charter Schools committee continued to maintain a clearinghouse of information on developments in that field and briefs policymakers from time to time. Committee Chair: Eli Lamb

In addition to participating in the Police Bureau's strategic planning process, our Community Policing committee was instrumental in City Council's adoption of a resolution reiterating its commitment to community policing. Committee Chair: Leslie S. Johnson

Finally, the new Portland Development Commission advocacy committee has created a plan for advocacy efforts and met, by request, with the Senate Revenue Committee to provide an overview of tax increment financing. Committee Chair: Sue Thomas

City Club's New Leaders Council strives to bridge the generation gap and other barriers to civic involvement by bringing together the best and brightest of Portland's young adult communities for information, interaction and action. In 2004-2005, NLC held eight events covering topics from health care and advocacy to local and international elections. This also marked a year of transition for New Leaders Council, as founding co-chairs Heather Kmetz and Guenevere Millius hand over program direction to members Doug Fasching and John Horvick, Now as liaison from the Club's Board of Governors, Millius will continue to work with Fasching and Horvick to introduce a number of exciting new programs in a variety of formats, including educational field trips, roundtable discussions and informal social opportunities.

ISSUE COMMITTEES

Access to prescription drugs. Corporate culture in the arts. The role of small businesses in a sustainable local economy. Reverse sprawl. The effect of Measure 37 on land use. Art critics' views of Portland. Homelessness. Independent publishing. Charter schools. Green building.

All these topics and more were explored this past year by City Club's six standing issue committees. Meeting regularly throughout the year, each offered individuals face-to-face conversations with community leaders and roundtable discussions of civic issues.

Three issue committee projects were of special note. In December 2004, the Health Care Issue Committee published its long-awaited information report, Examining the Health Care Safety Net in the Portland Area. This was the third and most comprehensive in a series of reports from the committee to educate City Club members and the community about this important segment of the health care system and to furnish an understanding against which proposals for improved services and financing may be evaluated.

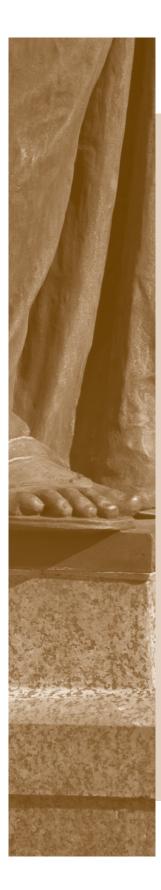

In May, the Growth Management and Environment Issue Committee co-sponsored a well-attended Local Innovations Bicycle Ride. This two-wheel tour of locations around Portland illustrated firsthand how individuals are creating positive change. At each stop, a speaker addressed the pack of more than 100 bicyclists who were exploring a sample of environmentally, architecturally and culturally significant changes that Portlanders have accomplished over the past year.

Under the auspices of the Citizenship & Government Issue Committee, some 40 City Club volunteers helped facilitate monthly naturalization ceremonies while offering a friendly face and helping hand to our newest citizens.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

In June 2004, City Club partnered with a number of local and national organizations to host a Town Hall Meeting on the Future of Media featuring Federal Communications Commissioners Michael Copps and Jonathan Adelstein; two panels of advocates and stakeholders; and community testimony as to how local media are serving the public interest, localism and diversity, which then was submitted as comment on the FCC's Localism Task Force docket.

On three summer nights, City Club and Slow Food Portland offered True to the Food, a sold-out series about the quality, equity and economics of the country's food supply.

In 2004, City Club also launched Citizen Salons, a sold-out series of fundraising dinners held in private homes with guest provocatuers leading discussions around a variety of topics.

On September 11, City Club joined Oregon Council for the Humanities and Multnomah County Library for The September Project, a communitywide conversation on patriotism and dissent held at six sites across the city.

Conversation continued in the spring when City Club hosted a Post-Illahee Lecture Discussion Series offering thoughtful followups to the noteworthy forums for environmental inquiry.

City Club also teamed up with Multnomah County Office of Citizen Involvement to present community strategy forums, providing citizen input into the county's budgeting process.

Once settled in its new City Club Commons, the Club began to host Final Fridays, a monthly, after-work open house providing a fun and casual way for members to socialize.

Since February 2005, visitors to City Club Commons, the adjacent Cafe Voilà and O'Bryant Square have also been able to take advantage of wireless Internet service provided for free by City Club, The Personal Telco Project and SawNet.

In the spring, City Club theater-lovers made group trips to see both Sojourn Theater's The Visit and Miracle Theatre Group's Fuente Ovejuna, sharing audience impressions and reactions through post-play discussions.

In 2004, City Club launched Citizens Blog, a virtual Friday Forum online anytime. A panel of 20 members sparked open discussion on topics from Club activities to current events.

City Club Commons continued to double as gallery, hosting quarterly art exhibits of original work by local artists with a portion of sales benefiting the Club's Annual Fund.

And on the last Monday of every month, booklovers regularly convened to gather at City Club Commons for Citizens Read, the monthly book discussion group that offers a comfortable environment to discuss books about civic issues.

MEMBERSHIP

learn • meet • interact • change • support
City Club continues to grow, with membership now over 1,500.

"City Club helps me to learn about critical issues facing our city and region while exposing me to new ideas."

— Kirstin Greene

"City Club gives me the opportunity to interact meaningfully with our elected officials, policy-makers, community leaders and Portland area residents from all walks of life." — Robert Jefferson

"City Club helps me to meet interesting people who care about Portland as much as I do."

— Serena Cruz

"City Club empowers me to be a positive influence for change and make a real difference in our community." — Wayne Lei

"Now, more than ever, it is critical that people are civically engaged, and I know that my membership with City Club provides vital support for its mission to keep the community informed and involved." — Jake Oken-Berg

EXPERIENCE CITY CLUB programs • research • advocacy • connections

As a member, you receive free general admission to Friday Forums to hear from — and ask questions of — key speakers, informative panels and fellow citizens ... and you can also take advantage of discounted luncheon tickets for you and up to two guests.

You have the opportunity to engage elected officials, policy-makers and experts as you prepare research reports that make Oregon history, and vote on research recommendations that determine Club positions.

You can put City Club's words into action through advocacy and awareness efforts that educate and inform members, citizens and decision-makers about Club positions.

As a member, you may participate for free in most New Leaders Council events — casual evening programs where the agenda always includes information, interaction and action.

City Club members connect with community leaders and fellow citizens face-to-face at monthly issue committee meetings, where you'll learn about the processes and people that effect change in Oregon.

You can lead online discussions as a panelist for Citizens Blog, a virtual forum for real issues, online anytime.

Members attend special events and field trips especially arranged for City Club, and you have the opportunity to reserve tickets to sell-out programs before they open to the public.

You can network at one of City Club's Final Fridays, monthly open house receptions at City Club Commons.

You have a unique opportunity to develop leadership skills by planning programs and conducting research and advocacy efforts while shaping the future of both the Club and the community.

Members stay informed through weekly Bulletin newsletters, research reports, e-mail announcements, annual report and an interactive Web site at www.pdxcityclub.org, where you can easily check the Club calendar, make online forum reservations, search the Club's vast archives of reports and program recordings, and much more.

MORE THAN A CHANGE OF ADDRESS

City Club has gone through a renaissance in the past year, most visible in the new City Club Commons office and function space as well as a new logo and motto.

On November 1, 2004, after 15 years in the downtown Loyalty Building,

City Club moved to a street-front space in the Pittock Block building on the corner of Southwest Ninth Avenue and Washington Street. This new home continues to house work and meeting space, but now also provides a warm and inviting environment for gatherings of all types. This versatile space — dubbed City Club Commons — is now home to monthly membership receptions, Citizens Read book discussions and New Leaders Council events, as well as regular meetings of the research committees, issue committees and other Club activities. In addition, we share part of our new space with Cafe Voilà, a locally owned cafe popular not only with those attending City Club events, but also with the general public.

The beautiful rendition of the Skidmore Fountain was designed by Michael Stueve and Gwen Millius of Stueve Royce Millius in consultation with a City Club design committee, Board of Governors and staff.

City Club's 2004-2005 Annual Report was designed and edited by Tim Krause. Fountain and staff photos by Kenneth Aaron Photography. Special thanks to Ron Laster of PrintResults for providing outstanding support year-round on City Club publications.

In conjunction with the creation of City Club
Commons, the Club also updated its visual identity.
City Club's Board of Governors chose a stylized version of Portland's historic Skidmore Fountain as the Club's new logo.

Skidmore Fountain speaks deeply of City Club's identity on many different levels. Most recognizably, the fountain is inscribed with a quote from Portland citizen and activist C.E.S. Wood: Good citizens are the riches of a city. Certainly, City Club has devoted its 88 years to growing good citizens and helping to ensure that Portland, and the whole region, are indeed rich.

But more than that, Skidmore Fountain embodies the best work and highest aspirations of the Club. The fountain sits in Ankeny Plaza and was designed to serve as a working water source, where citizens would gather to refresh themselves and their animals, and talk in a public and communal way. "Meet you at the fountain" was a popular expression of the day. Today, while the forces of culture are pulling many away from public life, City Club is still a gathering place, where citizens can take respite, talk together and reflect on their common interests.

Historic Skidmore Fountain, Portland's oldest piece of public art, was willed to the city by Stephen O. Skidmore as a memorial to his mother. Inspired by his 1878 trip to France for the Paris Exposition, Skidmore returned with a vision of a fountain in Portland with the same beautiful appeal to serve as refreshment for "horses, men and dogs." Set at Ankeny Plaza near Southwest First and Ankeny Streets, Skidmore Fountain was created by New York artist Olin W. Warner, who designed an octagonal granite base with two

Grecian women holding up a large bowl. The bottom pool, once a place for residents to quench their thirst, still has the brass rings that held copper cups. Four lower troughs, filled by spillover from the bottom pool, were designed for the convenience of dogs and horses. On the fountain is inscribed a quote from C.E.S. Wood that Portland has long cherished and still embraces: Good citizens are the riches of a city.

The face of civic engagement in Portland and around the country has changed. Our lives are more scheduled than they have ever been. We are saturated with information. Public discourse is taking place in the fiery crucible of talk radio and bigmoney political advertising. City Club, however, continues to stand in the breach where civil discourse is possible and citizens interact meaningfully with their government and with each other. We hope to use our new physical location to develop even more ways to engage you — our members — with the issues, with important leaders of our time and with each other.
